Trey Chapman is a Client Relationship Manager at Advocus Private Wealth.

Trey brings a wealth of knowledge from his prior roles at Kontent Incubator, ADP and Norfolk Southern. He was instrumental in the formation of the College Basketball Parents Association, an organization created to protect and empower the parents of college basketball athletes. Trey is particularly proud of the relationships he has cultivated with players, their families, colleagues, and professionals within collegiate and professional sports.

Raised in North Carolina, Trey attended the distinguished Wesleyan Christian Academy where he perfected his basketball game. While in high school, he lost a close friend who underwent cardiac arrest. Trey has kept his legacy alive by serving on the board of the SmileForJosh Foundation, which organizes the Josh Level Classic. The tournament is now revered as a top 10 basketball showcase in the country, with 100+ participants going on to attend Division 1 schools and 16 players going to the NBA.

As a Dean's List student athlete at Virginia Military Institute, Trey earned a Bachelor of Sciences in Applied Mathematics. He was a member of the Men's Basketball Team.

Trey currently resides in the Atlanta-metro area and will be relocating to Charlotte as part of joining Advocus Private Wealth.
